

Spring 2013 Online Courses in Native American Studies

100% online—Log on anytime, anywhere · Open to all—MSU admission not required

All courses
100% online

Federal Indian Law and Policy

(NASX 530) Trace the history of Indian law from the Constitution to present day. What are the legal rights of the modern day Indian? What are the legal rights of “domestic dependent nations (tribes)”? This course answers those questions and more.

3 graduate credits · Jan. 9–May 3, 2013

Instructor: William Eggers III

Indigenous Literature in the West (NASX 253/553*)

Explore Native American and First Nations literature and its relation to the American and Canadian West. Supplemental readings from classic American literature, historical non-fiction and film will be used to challenge or reflect upon what we mean when we refer to the “West” both as a place and an evolving idea.

3 graduate credits OR 3 undergraduate credits***

Jan. 9–May 3, 2013 · Instructor: Amy Gore

Indian Education for All: A Model for Culturally Responsive Pedagogy in Practice (NASX 591)

Explore the goals and evolution of Indian Education for All (IEFA) within a multicultural education framework, and discuss how educators are best prepared to implement this transformative educational policy. We will examine the historical, political and cultural forces that foster systematic disparities based on ascribed characteristics, and critically examine strategies for addressing such disparities. The course highlights Montana’s constitutional commitment to the cultural heritages of American Indians, which exemplifies the practical application of multicultural education.

Grant funding is available for K-12 teachers to take this course! Visit us online to see if you qualify

3 graduate credits · Jan. 22–April 19, 2013

Instructor: Jioanna Carjuzaa

Native America: Dispelling the Myths (NAS 550)

Through readings and videos, online conversations and creative projects, we will wrestle with the series of assumptions—“myths”—commonly held by non-Indians and sometimes Indians alike while learning the most basic elements of American Indian—which is to say American—history.

3 graduate credits · Jan. 9–May 3, 2013

Instructor: Rebecca Wingo

Register online or view full course descriptions at

<http://eu.montana.edu/creditdistance@montana.edu>
(800) 435-1286 (toll-free)

Earn an online graduate certificate in Native American Studies. These courses can apply!***

Learn more at:
<http://eu.montana.edu/online/degrees/NatAm.htm>

*Only the graduate section of NASX 553, Indigenous Literature in the West, can be applied toward a graduate certificate. All other courses will apply.

MONTANA
STATE UNIVERSITY

EXTENDED
UNIVERSITY